Margaret Wilkinson is a professional member of the Society of Analytical Psychology, London and an assistant editor of the Journal of Analytical Psychology. She is a member of the International Society for Neuro-Psychoanalysis and of the International Association for Relational Psychoanalysis and Psychotherapy. She teaches neuroscience research reading seminars for The Northern School of Child and Adolescent Psychotherapy in the University of Leeds and at The Society of Analytical Psychology, London. She lectures internationally on contemporary neuroscience and its relevance to clinical practice. She is the author of numerous papers, her book ‘Coming into mind. The mind-brain relationship: a Jungian clinical perspective’ was published by Routledge in 2006. She is in private practice in North Derbyshire, England.

Abstract:
In this seminar we will examine in detail the insights that contemporary neuroscience offers concerning the nature of the dreaming process. In the presentation I review our understanding of the process of working analytically with dreams in the light of this. I illustrate with dreams from several patients interleaved with the material concerning the dreaming process. Throughout the presentation I seek to demonstrate the way in which the total interactive, intersubjective experience in the analytic dyad as analyst and patient work with these dreams enables the development of the emotional scaffolding necessary for the process of ‘coming into mind’.
